

Medieval helpdesk

a contemporary art exhibition in a gazebo featuring:

Medieval helpdesk is an ongoing art, writing and exhibition project by Lara Eggleton and David Steans. This one-day exhibition, as part of the University of Leeds International Medieval Congress 2015, is its first public manifestation.

Medieval helpdesk invites visitors to discuss the works and general theme with the organisers, who will be present throughout the day, along with some of the artists.

“Challenging a simplistic view of the broad period known as the ‘Dark Ages’, the exhibition considers how the medieval functions as a rich storehouse of ideas, aesthetic forms and processes that continue to inform the production of art and its terms of engagement. Highlighting the reuse and appropriation of elements from the past, Medieval helpdesk explores the currency of the medieval to the wider cultural imaginary.” The helpdesk 2015
